Nuclear Energy in Thailand: Opportunities for U.S. Companies

8:30 a.m. Monday, February 22, 2010

The U.S. Trade and Development Agency (USTDA) is hosting a delegation from Thailand on a visit to Washington D.C. to encourage partnerships with U.S. businesses that can participate in and support Thailand's nuclear power development plans. The delegation is led by Dr. Norkun Sitthipong, Deputy Permanent Secretary and Director, Nuclear Power Program Development Office of the Ministry of Energy. Other organizations represented are the Electric Generating Authority of Thailand (EGAT) and the Ministry of Science and Technology (MOST).

USTDA is sponsoring a Business Briefing for U.S. companies to learn more about Thailand's construction plans, investment opportunities, and regulatory framework for civil nuclear energy.

U.S. companies with expertise in the commercial nuclear power industry are invited to participate in a one-day business briefing to:

- Meet with senior decision makers from Thailand who are directly involved in the development of this growing sector.
- Network with U.S. industry and U.S. government stakeholders who are interested in the sector.
- Learn more about Thailand's nuclear energy program.
- Learn about USTDA's funding programs.
- Attend one-on-one meetings with the delegates.
